

The Steinhardt School of Culture, Education, and Human Development Department of Applied Psychology

Assistant Professor - Clinical Counseling Psychology Program

New York University's Steinhardt School of Culture, Education, and Human Development invites applications for a tenure-track Assistant Professor in the Clinical/Counseling Psychology Program to begin September 1, 2025. The appointed faculty member will be a member of the Department of Applied Psychology. The Clinical/Counseling Psychology Program operates from a scientist-practitioner model and integrates models traditionally associated with clinical psychology and counseling psychology, which together equip students to be multi-faceted and culturally informed psychologists who are prepared for both research and clinical-practice careers. The successful applicant will join a group of psychologists who focus on a diverse set of research areas and utilize various methods and approaches to address important issues in the field of clinical and counseling psychology. We seek applicants whose research explores issues within the lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, and/or queer (LGBTQ+) population(s) in the U.S. or other parts of the world, and whose research, mentorship, teaching, and service reflects a commitment to equity, belonging, and justice.

Successful applicants will join the vibrant department of Applied Psychology, which includes (a) a large and active undergraduate program with research, theory, and action among its core pillars, (b) two MA degree-granting programs in Counseling for Mental Health & Wellness and Human Development Research & Policy; and (c) three PhD programs that enroll fully funded doctoral students (5 years of fellowship) in Developmental Psychology, Clinical/Counseling Psychology, and Psychology & Social Intervention. The department has an excellent track record of procuring extramural funding for research and training, supporting collaborative and transdisciplinary scholarship, and a commitment to equity, inclusion, and belonging.

NYU Steinhardt is a uniquely interdisciplinary school, committed to a holistic understanding of people and human development across the lifespan. NYU Steinhardt has one-of-a-kind integration of education, communication, health, and the arts, with eleven departments, seventeen research centers and institutes, nearly 300 full-time faculty, and close to six thousand students. We are committed to substantially increasing the proportion of our faculty from historically underrepresented groups as we strive to create the most intellectually diverse, inclusive, and equitable institution that we can.

Responsibilities: The successful candidate is expected to engage in strong programmatic research; disseminate cutting-edge science; pursue and obtain grant funding; teach and advise undergraduate and graduate students; and provide service to the Program, Department, School, and University.

NYU's dynamic Global Network University includes NYU Abu Dhabi, NYU Shanghai, and international programs and academic centers around the world. NYU Steinhardt faculty may have the opportunity to engage in research and teaching at these global study and research sites.

Qualifications: In addition to a demonstrated commitment to scholarship and teaching, applicants must have a PhD in Psychology or a related discipline. Priority will be given to those with a doctorate from an APA-approved program in Clinical or Counseling Psychology. The successful candidate will demonstrate evidence of strong scholarly productivity, including an active agenda of research and publication, the ability to secure and maintain external funding to support their research program, and the ability to meaningfully contribute to undergraduate and graduate training programs.

Application Instructions: Applicants should apply online via Interfolio. Candidates should upload: (a) cover letter providing short summary of experience and accomplishments, (b) curriculum vita, (c) three representative scholarly publications, (d) research statement (2-3 pages), (e) teaching statement (1-2 pages), (f) diversity statement (1-2 pages), and (g) the names and contact information for three referees (letters will be requested for short-listed candidates).

Review of applications begins immediately and continues until the search is complete.
