The Centrality of Education Science in the Contemporary Research University

Join the University of Oregon College of Education for a panel discussion on the significant role of education science in the positioning and value of modern universities. The following esteemed panelists will highlight the innovative research originating from colleges of education while discussing the critical role of education research in the 21st century:

Catherine Bradshaw
University of Virginia, Johns Hopkins University

Erin Chaparro
University of Oregon

Darleen Opfer
RAND Corporation

Frank Worrell
University of California, Berkeley

After the presentation, join us for a reception and learn more about the research and outreach units within our College of Education.
